Death of Mrs. Harrison Early This Morning.

Singularly Peaceful Close of a Centle and Noble Life.

Her Last Words to Her Husband-The Income by Their Great Be-

Ru Telegraph to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—[By the Associated Press.] Mrs. Harison is no more. At 1:40 o'clock this (Tuesday) morning came the end. For the second time in the history of the White House a President's wife has died within its walls. Mrs. Harrison met death with the patience and resignation of a devout Christian, and her last days were comparatively free from pain.

For twenty-four hours the President and family have been almost constantly at the bedside awaiting the end. Sun day night was without special incident; but, late and early, so frequently that he could have slept but little if at all, the President was in and out of the sick chamber and was never easy for any length of time. Yesterday was clear and crisp and cool, and perhaps the inspiring sun-shine and dryness of the atmosphere somewhat helped the invalid and acted as a stimulant. Whenever she awoke from her troubled and unsatisfactory sleep she was conscious. She could still recognize her surroundings and a glance of recognition greeted the physician when he entered the sick room in the morning.

Atty.-Gen. Miller called early and saw Mr. Halford; so did M. de Struve, the Russian Minister; Minister Struce, the Russian Minister: Minister Grup of Sweden; Rev. Dr. Hamlin, the family pastor; Assistant Secretary Grant and Indian Commissioner Morgan. Dr. Gardner was at the patient's bedside nearly the entire forenoon. He went away two or three times to at-He went away two or three times to attend to other professional duties, but at no one time was he absent more than half an hour. When asked about her condition he frankly admitted that death was very near, and that, remarkable as Mrs. Harrison's vitality was, he did not see how she could live more than a few hours.

HER LAST WORDS.

Mrs. Harrison at noon was still conscious. A little before that time the President, leaning over her, asked if she wished for anything. With the old-time smile that the approach of her death only made more tender and trust-ful, she answered low but very dis-

At 1 o'clock, as he left the house, Dr. Gardner said that he did not think more than five or six hours of life remained for Mrs. Harrison. He said most of the for Mrs. Harrison. He said most of the time she was in a sleepy semi-unconscious condition from which she occasionally rallied. During these spells of wakefulness she recognized those around her, and sometimes responded feebly but clearly and intelligently to inquiries made. The doctor said his efforts were devoted solely to making nquiries made. The doctor said his forts were devoted solely to making the patient as comfortable as possible the patient as comfortable as possible in her dying hours. She could not take nourishment of any kind and frequent applications of stimulating-moisture to her parched lips was the only treatment that afforded any relief. The doctor returned about noon and found the patient even weaker than before, almost completely prostrated and unable longer to speak or course. Apparently she was conscious. There was little change during the afternoon, but every change was for the worse, and the watchers were fearful that death would ensue about sun-from 4 o'clock until well into the evening the President and all members of the family remained unceasingly at Mrs. Harrison's bedside. As the day waned and the sun sank behind the western hills the anxiety of the watchers became more and more intense. The shadows deepened, the sun sank to rest, night came and the end was not.

A FALSE REPORT SENT OUT. The telegraph instruments in the eastern part of the building were steadily ticking all day, bringing from far and near inquiries from friends of the fam-ily. But after 8 o'clock they ticked faster and faster. Some one had sent a dispatch to Indianapolis bulleting Mrs. Harrison's death. The premature reports spread rapidly over the country from west to east, and there began to from west to east, and there began to flow in upon the wires messages of con-dolence addressed to the President. Mr. Halford promptly authorized a prompt denial, but it did not overtake the original story, and the messages continued to arrive in numbers.

Just after 6 o'clock Mrs. Harrison suffered another sinking spell, and mes-wages were sent by Halford to absent Cabinet officers, asking them to return to Washington immediately. But the sick woman had still sufficient reserve rength to rally once more and repulse attack of the dread visitor who overed at the threshold. Soon after

The measure of the cebing tide was the resultation which slowly tide was the respiration, which slowly sank from fifteen at nightfall to twelve sank from fifteen at nightfall to twelve ar midnight.

The physician had said that if she tided over that hour she might survive until daylight, so there was visible an air of relief when the gong sounded 12. The hope inspired, however, was only of short duration. About 12:30 o'clock the physician discerned a noticeable weakness of the heart's action, followed almost immediately by a slight decrease of respiration. He notified the grief-stricken family grouped around the conch that the end had approached very near. This intelligence had a most depressing effect upon the President, and he sustained himself with the greatest difficulty. Dr. Gardner, President, and he sustained himself with the greatest difficulty. Dr. Gardner, after narrowly examining the countenance and feeling the pulse, sorrowfully announced that all indications justified the belief that the patient could not survive more than half an hour. This was at 12:45 o'clock. The minutes passed with frightful rapidity and half an hour passed. The almost helpless form, however, still retained the sacred apark. The resistance offered by the constitution of the patient was marvelous and surprising to the physician and all at the bedside. There was no struggle, no exhibition of pain, but a simple, passive resistance that was baffling in its quiet intensity.

THE CLOSING SCENES.

In a few minutes Dr. Gardner took up the feeble hand and felt the wrist. The blood crept through the contract ing arteries, but how slowly. He shook his head and said that a brief fifteen minutes must surely finish the struggle The agitation of the family could no longer be controlled, and realizing his utter helplessness to longer cope with the formidable foe and from consideration for the sacredness of such grief as this, the devoted physician and friend bowed his head and passed out of the door. Outside of the threshold he took door. Outside of the threshold he took his station and waited. It was not long. The minutes flew like seconds. Suddenly there was an expression of heart-stricken woe, and the end had come. The President was beside his dying wife, as he had been for nine hours continuously, and his was the last of the loved features her eyes had dwelt upon

Her breath came labored and very slow As the hands of the clock crept toward he hands of the clock crept toward the next hour it grew fainter yet and less frequent and as the timepiece marked the hour, 1:40 o'clock, there was an interruption of the feeble breath, a resumption and then a stop, this time to be eternal, and the life of Caroline Scott Harrison, had gone out Caroline Scott Harrison had gone out Caroline Scott Harrison had gone out peacefully and quietly and without pain.

All of the family in Washington were present at the deathbed except three little grand-children and the enerable Dr. Scott, father of Mrs. Harrison. FRESNO, Oct. 24 .- | By the Associated Press.] The jury in the Sontag trial was completed this morning.

Afternoon proceedings in the case were opened by the reading of the indictment charging John Conant, George C. Conant and Christopher Evans with robbery. The complaint does not charge train-robbery, the punishment of which is death or life imprisonment.

Al Phipps testified that on the night of the robbery he took an engine at Mendota., The train stopped at Collis, and as it was pulling out of Collis wit-ness noticed a man's coat fluttering in the wind back of the tender. The next moment a masked man crawled over the tender and covered him with a shotgun. Phipps made an attempt to escape. As he was doing so another masked man he was doing so another masked man covered him with a shotgun and told him to stop at the next station at the switch nearest Fresno. The other man then came and stood beside the first man. Witness continued: "We were ordered to throw up our hands He took my watch and felt for som money in my pocket. As soon as we came to the switch he fired three shots in the air out of his revolver. Then he told me to stop quick and I immediately began to apply air brakes." Witness added that he saw George Sontag, the prisoner, in Mendota July 18. The man who stood on the cab with witness that night was about the same size as de-fendant.

The remainder of the testimony concerning the robbery was about the same as that already published. Witness was ordered to put out the headlight and go ahead, while the fireman went with the robbers. A number of shots were fired, followed a few minutes later by the explosion of bombs.

"Do you anatify this man as the one who talked with you on the engine that night?" asked the District Attorney.

By Telegraph to The Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 24.—[By the Associated Press.] Hon. Whitelaw Reid and Chauncey M. Depew received a genuine Hoosier welcome all along the line in Indiana today. Logansport was the first stopping place of importance. As the distinguished visitors arrived they were roundly cheered by crowds who gathered when the firing of cannon and ringing of bells announced their arrival. Messrs. Reid and Depew were escorted to the rink by the Logansport Republican Club and other organizas. The rink was packed and 1000 or more people were unable to get in

Reid was first introduced and talked. of the calamity cry raised by the Democrats. He said he failed to see any signs of tribulation in his trip across the northern part of Indiana. Chauncey M. Depew was then introduced and r leaving Logansport the train stopped at Kokomo, where preparations for the reception were made on an elaborate scale. Some 6000 people were present with gaily trimmed wagons and stands erected near by, from which brief speeches were made.

The distinguished travelers also spoke at Sharpsville. Tipton and Noblesville, where the people turned out by thousands. They then proceeded to this city. The home of President Harrison extended a royal greeting to his associate on the ticket, Whitelaw Reid, and that other eminent New Yorker, Chauncey M Depew. Nearly every city and town in Indiana was represented by a delegation. They assembled with drum cerps and brass bands at the union depot and escorted the distinguished. visitors to the Denison Hotel. on enthusiastic crowd called Reid and Depew to the balcony, where both spoke Depet to the balcony, where both spoke a few words and bowed their acknowledgements. Tonight's meeting was ander the auspices of the Commercial Travelers' Republican Club of Indiana. The parade preceding the addresses moved at 8 o'clock. The two largest halls in the city had been procured for the occasion. Both were packed and the occasion. Both were packed and scores of people were turned away, but the overflow meeting was addressed by ex-Congressman Mason of Chicago, while thousands of others marched and countermarched upon the principal streets. Each distinguished gentleman spoke at both places of meeting.

His appearance was greeted by tremendous cheering. When quiet was retored, Depew said:

At this moment, in this city and in this presence one thought is uppermost with us a.t. head of a family who was not glad in his soul that his children saw such a household in the Executive Mansion. And now the light of the house is going out. Into the holy circle of that grief none of us may vanture. We can only say as the whole lands says: "May the God of their fathers and our fathers be with them both." You will not blame me if at this time in this city and in the presence of this immense sympathy, I am little inclined to partisan vehemence in discussing partisan disagreements. I am here to night to Say no word in discouragement of any Democrat as such. If he stands by the Constitution and laws of our common country, whatever our differences as partisans, I am proud to clasp hands with him as an American. If he does not stand by them, I'm his enemy now and forever.

Many of us are fresh from a wonderful spectacle which even our great-grandchildren's children's children cannot see repeated. In the marvelous city which sixty years ago was a wilderness were gathered official representatives of the Republic and of most of the forty-four independent States that compose the great multitude of self-governing freemen who have built up this mighty Nation upon this sontinent, to commemorate the four hundredth anniversary of its discovery. As I saw grouped there before the largest audience ever gathered beneath a single roof with all official forms of the state and dignity that befitted a solemn national ceremonial of one of the greatest of earthly governments; as I witnessed this pageant and strove to grasp an idequate-conception of its significance, one unbidden thought recurred—how different would have been this celebration, how different the art of the Republican party had been defeated in 1860, or even in 1864. It is the peculiar glory of that grand oid party that has guided this country for thirty years to unparalleled prosperity and a union of tested supremacy, so that even its enemies are forced to approve if not to praise its history.

Mr. Reid proceeded at some length to review the currency and

Mr. Reid proceeded at some length to review the currency and tariff questions. He then spoke of the record of Harrison's administration and said:

The story of it is known and read by all men. The Indiana President has brought a fresh distinction to a name conspicuous in his country's annals for more than a century, and has shed fresh honor upon a state as proud of her past and as ambitious for her future as any in the whole glittering galaxy. The story of the administration is well knum, but everybody does not hear so often that the President himself has been the guarding mind and inspiring soul of its whole success. Whatever you do, he will be reelected; we mean to see to that in New York. We did it the last time, and shall do it again. But for the sake of this great State and her great and worthy son. I beg that no effort of yours shall be lacking to make sure that when the triumph for redianals. President is won we may hear from the eastern end of the town before from the eastern end of the town before a Democratic parade started from the west end. Such a crowd of spectators was never before seen in Indianapolis. The best of good humor everywhere prevailed and there was not the slightest disturbance at any point. Bourke Cockran, who arrived from New York, held a reception at his hotel during the afternoon. At 7 o'clock he started for the Grand Operahouse, where he made a speech.

It is not a question in the present cam-paign of candidates, but of principles. We should determine our course without preju-dice. No man should be so blind a fol-lower of his party as to adhere to it when the firmly believes its policy is detrimental lower of his party as to antere to it when he firmly believes its policy is detrimental to the country. Sugar is 2 cents per pound cheaper now than two years ago. Why? There is no more of it hade, but two years ago the tax of 2 cents per pound was taken off and sugar went down that amount in price. This demonstrates that when you take a tax an off article the price goes down. The merchant takes wheat to Liverpool and there sells it at 70 cents. He buys goods and starts back to this country. When he arrives and before he can land he must pay a duty of 50 per cent. A valorem. Maj. McKinley says the foreigner pays the tax. The foreigner has my wheat; go and tax him, not me. Democrats are not advocating tree trade. It is a question of reasonable, moderate tariff against the Republican extortionate one.

FIGURING ON NEW YORK.

Estimates of the Total Vote and Possible Majorities.
New York, Oct. 24.—By the Associated Press.] The Herald publishes cal-culations on the city's vote, based on two day's registration. It says: There have now been registered in round umbers 202,000 voters. This tremennumbers 202,000 voters. This tremendous registration in two days foreshadows a total of 320,000 or 330,000 for two more days, as it would be against all precedent if fewer than 60,000 registered each day. Some enthusiastic soul puts the total as high as 340,000. About 8 per cent. of the voters who register do not go to the polls. If we take out.8 per cent. we may still be very sure that the total vote of New York city will be more than 300,000. It may go up to 315,000.

New York city will be more than 300,000. It may go up to 315,000. Up to this point it is a matter of cold mathematics, and both sides have to agree, but here they split as to the division of the vote. The Republicans say they will get at least 120,000. If we take as the total vote only 300,000 (and that seems to be the lowest possible figure) 180,000 would be left to be divided among all other tickets. Not more than 5000 will be polled by the Prohibitionists, People's party and Socialists, Woman Suffrag'sts and all the rest. Therefore the Democratic plurality in New York city will be 55,000. Democratic prophets will not admit that the vote will be less than 320,000. Then they say prophets will not aunoe less than 320,000. the Republicans cannot have more than 110,000. That would leave 210,000 for all other tickets, of which 205,000 would be for the Democrats, or a plurality of

A BITTER REPLY.

Minister Egan's Answer to MacVeagh's Criticism.

The Philadelphian Called a Renegade Country and Creed-The Minister's Defense of His Record in Irlsh Agitation,

By Telegraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—[By the Associated Press. | Patrick Egan, Minister to Chile, today made public his reply to the recent speech of Wayne MacVeagh reflecting on Egan's character and official fitness. In it Egan says in part:

reflecting on Egan's character and official fitness. In it Egan says in part:

Tperceive by the daily press that at a meeting in Cooper Union, under the auspices of the Democratic Club of New York, that, a renegade from your party as you are said to be from your people and creed, you attempt to pallitate your apostacy by undertaking to do that which the London Times failed to accomplish, to besmirth my good name. With the adroitness of a police court pettifogger, you, under pretext of referring to something that somebody else had said, assail me; first as a "swindler" who "failed to account for a large trust fund placed in his charge"; second, you say "it was well known at Washington when he was appointed what the charges were, and that he had fied the country to avoid arrest and trial on a very serious criminal charge"; third, you describe me as a "sham patriot and fugitive from criminal justice," to which you are pleased to add that you were "greatly surprised and disgusted to find such a man selected to represent the country in a high diplomatic post," and that you not only reasserted your statement that my appointment "was an insult to Chile." but that you also considered it "an insult to every self-respecting Irishman in the Unified States."

I should treat those coarse and cowardly insults, coming as they do from one of the last strugglers of the retreating knownothings, who find that there is no place for them in the Republican party, with the same contempt I have shown for all attacks in the English and American pro-British press, were it not that they were spoken at a meeting at which figured as vice-presidents such names as T. F. Gilroy, William R. Grace, J. J. & Donoghue, John D. Crimmins and others, and that it is reported that your words were received with "loud cheering." I am convinced that in the entire ranks of the Republican party, there that your words were received wit cheering." I am convinced that in the en-tire ranks of the Republican party there could not be found a single man who would make upon the character of any Irish American so wanton, foul and unfounded American so wanton, foul and unfounded attack as you have made upon me; but if such a one could be found and he should, under similar circumstances, assail in like manner in my presence any of the gentlemen I have named above. I will simply say that there would not be in New York city any hall sufficiently large to contain him and me. I would publicly bring him to order and either he or I should leave the building.

In your great desire to assail me you have been forced. I perceive, to fall back entirely upon my connection with the Irish movement in Ireland. To the Irish race here and in the old land my course of conduct in that connection needs no vindication.

Egan then goes on to say that for the information of his American friends he quotes from the report of the auditors of the Land League fund at the time of his resignation as treasurer, in which they certify that every item is fully and satisfactorily vouched for, and bear tes-timony to the systematic and businesskept by Egan. Secondly, there was never a formal charge made against him by the English government, the only "criminal charges" being those made by a hastile press, based upon the Pigott forgeries. Those were fully investigated by the Parnell-Times committee in 1888-89, with well-known results. "The London Times lost by this "The London Times lost by this transaction." says Mr. Egan, "in damages and costs the enormous sum of £260,000. Three months later McDonald, principal owner of the Times, dies from worrying, and for two years the 'Thunderer' paid no dividend."

With regard to being a sham patriot With regard to being a sham patriot and fugitive from criminal justice, Mr. Egan leaves the first part of the charge to the judgment of his Irish-American fellow-citizens and to the second part pleads guilty of being fugitive in the stme way as were Thomas Addis Emmet, Richard O'Gorman, and many others, and is sincerely proud of it. He calls attention to the fact that within a short attention to the fact that within a short time after his arrival in this country he time after his arrival in this country he was elected president of the-Irish National League of America, which during his term of office sent to Ireland $850,000, and that from Ireland was forwarded to him in 1883, a present of a costly service of silver, accompanied by a flatterng address signed by Parnell, McCarthy, Davitt, Dillon and others. He concludes:

others. He concludes:

In contradistinction to your mugwump opinions, permit me in conclusion to quote the sentiments expressed by President Harrison upon the Irish love of native land, which you consider such a grave offense against "criminal justice." In addressing a delegation of Irish Americans, he said: "You are Americans, Irish-Americans, a nd although you have given the concentrated loyalty of your nonest hearts to the starry flag of your adopted country, you have not torgotten and you ought not to forget to revere and venerate the land of your birth. If a spring of green was found upon the bloody jacket of a Union, soldier who lay dead on Mission Ridge, the flag he died for was his flag, and the green only a memory and an inspiration."

The Court then reviewed the fact, going back to the time when the first information was filed in Coffey's court, and read the law which makes it a elony for a legislator to accept a bribe He also read the indictment in which Bruner is charged with having offered, for a bribe, the use of his influence to defeat the Scalpers' Bill. The Judge

If you are satisfied that Bruner did ask for this bribe of Ottlinger then the defendant is guilty as charged. The accused must be presumed innocent until proven guilty. This conclusion must be with you to the juryroom. A doubt must, however, be a doubt as to the truth of the charge. It must not be a far-fetched doubt, founded upon conjecture, but must be an honest misgiving which is not merely one of fancy. The court has no authority to charge you upon the weight of the testimony.

In order to convict the law does not require overwhelming evidences of guilt.

You are to consider all the circumstances of the case with a view the circumstances of the case with a view to ascertaining the truth. You are to put aside all passion so that you can come to an unprejudiced conclusion. It is not necessary for you to fix upon the exact date when Bruner asked this bribe of Ottinger; you can fix the time anywhere between the 17th of February, 1891, and Aprill, 1892. It makes no difference whether the bribe was asked before or after the adjournment of the Lerislature. It is the asking of the of the Legislature. It is the asking of the bribe here in San Francisco, if one was asked, which constitutes the felony.

Judge Wallace then told about the grand jury, which, he said, had been designated the "Wallace grand jury." "All members of it," said he, "were compelled to serve, except Henley. He could have claimed exemption if he had chosen." The judge then said that Henley had been unjustly vilified, and spoke a good word for the Citizens' Defense Committee. The Court declared that Ottinger was not an accomplice in a missionary from Singapore, who arrived on the steamer Rio Janeiro on Saturday, brings information that the Rodriguez brothers were beheaded by the authorities at Manila in the latter part of Abgust. The Rodriguez brothers were two exconvicts who escaped several years ago from the penal colony at New Caledonia, and whose last exploit was the capture of the Tahitan yacht Ninaloaiti, in August, by causing Moloi, the cook of the vessel, which was engaged in trading among the islands, to poison the crew of four, while the others disposed of the captain and supeacargo by shooting them dead as they sat at their table. Saturday, brings information that the

According to Miss Wyckoff's information, Moloi revenged himself for the refusal of the Rodriguez' brothers to comply with their promise to divide with him the profits of their crime, amounting to $20,000, by betraying them to the officers of a Spanish revenue cutter at Manila.
Moloi testified against the brothers at the trial, but was in turn convicted as the trial, but was in turn convicted as an accomplice and was the first to be beheaded. The two brothers met their fate stoically. The yacht will be re-turned to the King of Tahiti, to whom it rightfully belonys. BY A NEW ROUTE

Mail to Find a Substitute for th NEW YORK, Oct. 24 .- [By the Associated Press. | In regard to the report that the Pacific Mail Steamship were to sever relations and the steam ship company make a contract with the partially built Inter-Ocean Railway of Honduras, having a gulf terminal at Puerto Cortez and a Pacific port in the Gulf of Fonseca, the following state-ment is issued by the New York agency of the Panama Railroad Company of the Panama Railroad Company.

The Panama Railroad Company is in the market for steamers to run both on the Atlantic and Pacific oceans in connection with the road after February 1, 1893. The reason for this is that at the last moment the renewal of the contract with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has fallen through, the Pacific Mail Steamship Company having declined to execute it. We understand that their refusal was caused by the dissolution of the Transcontinental Association, which has been paying the Pacific Mail Steamship Company a large stipulated sum for the carriage of certain trame.

Vice-President Houston, of the Pa Vice-President Houston, or the ra-cific Mail Company says. "The re-marks attributed to me yesterday morn-ing about a break with the Panama Company are entirely incorrect, and almost the reverse of what I said on the subject. What I did say was that the Panama Railroad Company required us to enter into a contract guarateeing s to enter into a contract guarateeing to it more money for business between San Francisco and New York than we San Francisco and New York than we received ourselves, and, which, of course, was impossible. The threat to put on steamers in opposition to us is simply absurd, because it would have to guarantee such steamers sufficient earnings to support them, which cannot be done. The trade with the Panama Railroad Company is therefore off. The contract, however, does fore off. The contract, however, does not expire until February 1, next, and we feel perfectly confident of being able to take care of the Pacific Mail interests after that time. It is too early to say what the Pacific Mail Company proposes to do."

Mexican Troops Unable to Quell the Yaqui Rising. NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 24.—[By the Associated Press. | The Times-Democrat's Chihuahua special says that a courier arrived there this morning from Salvaripa, in the heart of the Sierra Madre, bringing a message to the com-Madre. bringing a message to the commander of the garrison from Gen. Sixto Marques, commander of the federal troops in the state of Chihuahua, who left there about ten days ago with 500 infantry to quell a disturbance among the Yaqai Indians near Salvaripa. The message from Gen. Marquez called for reinforcements, stating that several hundred Indians are on the warrath and are massacreing unprothe warpath and are massacreing unprotected settlers whenever opportunit to cope with the daring and desperate savages, and in an engagement with band of them last Thursday near Salvaripa, the government troops were re-pulsed with the loss of ten men.

The Yaqai Indians have been restless and discontented ever since their patron Saint Terressa Urrea, was exiled from them, and it is believed it will take a large force of soldiers to bring them into subjection again.

Buffalo, Oct. 24.—Switchmen of the country are preparing for a monster strike next May, expecting to cripple the World's Fair business of railroads and force them to concede to the demands of the employés.

Said Secretary Joseph Hermerle, of the Switchmen's Union: "It will be a strike the like of which was never seen, and it will extend all over the country. People would not want the World's Fair injured, and clamor would arise which would force the roads to a settlement."

Trouble in the Woodhull Camp.
CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—John Buddulph Martin, British representative at the World's Fair, and husband of Victoria Woodhull, was today sued by his brother-in-law, Dr. Heber Claffin, for $25,000 or slander. It is said that there has been ill-feeling for some time between the two, but the climax came last week when Martin declared that Claffin "amounted to nothing." He is also accused of declaring that Claffin had been receiving money from Sir Francis Cook, brother-in-law to both parties. brother-in-law to both parties.

Take a Long Look Ahead

The City Water Company publishes card in a morning paper, which is in the nature of a defense and a counter attack upon ephemeral publications recently issued in advocacy of the water bonds. We have nothing to do with any controversy over water rates in Los Angeles and other cities, and we hardly deem it necessary to take up the question as to whether the water ompany has dabbled in politics or not; but it seems to us that the card in question understates some, matters of fact pertaining to the proposed issue of bonds. That is the question before the people, and that is the question which should be discussed in a calm, businesslike way. We quote from the water company's card:

company's card:

It is proposed to expend $526,000 for the headworks, pumping plant and distributing mains over the territory occupied by the Citizens' Water Company on the hills. This will require an amount of $52,600 per year for the interest and sinking fund. Under ordinary municipal management it will not be possible to collect, at the present ordinance rates, a sufficient amount to more than pay the operating expenent ordinance rates, a sufficient amount to more than pay the operating expenses of such a plaut, which will necessarily be much greater than the expense of the present system, both for fuel and for labor. The interest and sinking fund will have to be met by the people of the entire city in the shape of an increased tax levy.

It is understood that the Citizen.

It is understood that the Citizens' Water Company now collects from the consumers about $50,000 a year. If the city should build its own headworks, acquire the plant of the Citizens' Water elevated portions of the city, this revenue would be increased rather than di-minished. With a good water supply, there is no doubt that the hill section would experience an impetus in growth and development; there would be more people to take water and pay for it There is no reasonable doubt that within two years, if the city takes charge of this supply, the revenues may be swelled to $60,000 a year. The estimated cost of operating the plant is $14,000 a year. When the water company asserts that the entire revenues would be consumed in operating these works it evidently makes a miscalculation. Adding the interest and sinking fund charges-$52,600-to the operating expenses would give a gross charge of $66,600. This includes an annual sum of $26,300 to go into the sinking fund, and is in the nature of an investment. If the business de lops as estimated, it will be seen that the revenues will come very close to paying all expenses, and the installments of original cost. Taking into account the lessened amount of debt each year, the lessened interest and the naturally increasing revenues, it is only a matter of a few years when even this small system would that fellow-feel. more than pay all charges against it.

Another fact should be taken into obliterates all lines at such an hour as consideration: In building the headontemplated, we are build-the benefit of the whole door death knocks for admittance. THE LAST FAREWELL.

pany and citizens. The hill section is an integral part of the city; whatever injures it, injures the whole munici pality; whatever benefits it, bene fits the whole. If the highlands can be helped out of their dilemma on the water question, and at the same time the foundations the same time for a broad and comprehensive system can be laid, there should be no talk about the appropriation going to benefit a particular section. Great cities are not built up by such narrowmindedness. In a certain sense the various sections of Los Angeles must stand or fall together.

It was shown by an article in these columns yesterday that, when the city secures control of the entire water system, as it is bound by contract to do in 1898, it may count on an annual income from the upper and lower systems together of about $300,000. This allows but little for the growth of the city in the meantime, and presupposes that the same rates he charged then as now. This will allow the city to reimburse itself for any sums put into the sinking fund on the headworks, and keep up all annual charges and there will still be a margin for betterments and to reduce rates to consumers.

Our idea is that the city ought to pay out of its current expense funds a reasonable sum for water used for parks, for fires, for street sprinkling, flushing sewers and all other public purposes and thus allow a very decided reduction of rates to private consumers. It is often said, to the disparagement of our city, that it costs a poor man more for water than for bread. This overstates the case, but the fact remains that Los Angeles would benefit greatly by furnishing to its citizens an abundance of pure water at a low rate. It would be a great card in inducing immigration. It to this could be added the advantages of a system which would furnish, on occasion, sufficient pressure for extinguishing fires, for running elevators and for manufacturing purposes the city would secure a great advantage.

All these things should be taken into consideration. Los Angeles is now about to take one of the most important steps in her career-a step which practically determines whether our water system shall eventually be under public or private management. Our citizens could make no greater mistake than to be influenced in this step by narrow prejudice, sectional jealousy or mistaken economy. Let us take a long look ahead.

into prominent notice recently by local ment, showing the California building, Company and extend the mains to other discussion is known as Constitutional the other World's Fair buildings at called upon to vote yes or no upon it at the November election, a little discussion will not be out of order. The amendment in question is as follows:

Section 18. No county, city, town Section 18. No county, city, town, township, board of education, or school district, shall incur any indebtedness or liability, in any manner, or for any purpose, exceeding in any year the income and revenue provided for it for such year, without the assent of two-thirds of the qualified spectors thereof withing of the qualified energy of the of the qualified electors thereof voting except as to the words not to exceed forty years. The present limit of bonded indebtedness is twenty years. There seems to be a pretty general con currence in the opinion that the amendment should be carried. Of course, i is not necessary, if the amendment be adopted, that all municipal and county indebtedness in honds should run forty years; but it is well enough to set the maximum limit ahead. With the sinking fund proviso in force, the tax re quired to pay interest and extin-guish the debt in twenty years is sometimes severe, and acts as a bar to necessary improvements. California is now in the stage of rapid development, and most people think that posterity should be called upon to bear its share of the cost of improvements which are to be left for its benefit. The fortyyears' plan will result in bonds even more satisfactory to investors than twenty-years securities, and hence there is no objection to be raised from that quarter. With the careful provisis suffering, sorrow and death, and that it behooves us, then, to take a long look ion for payment and the solvent condi-if a slight bit of pecuniary aid can help ahead, and consult the greatest good to tion of California cities generally, their credit is sure to remain first class, and there can be no reasonable objection to allowing them longer time in which to yonder, and there you are.

There is considerable of a plot to the play—

To be sure there are dear old gags in the plece that are so hoary with age as to command respect, but there are also enough new ones to keep the fun moving right along, trailing behind it an almost continuous succession of shrieks and yells of laughter. The piece is not high comedy and abounds in horse play, but it is horse play that does not grow offensive at any time and that seems apropos to the situation. Mr. Kelly sings his topical song "There are Moments When One Wants to Be Alone" as no other person can sing it, and he dances as only an Irishman can do it. Harry Kelly is immensely clever and as the bogus parson in the last act made up in a way to send the audience into convulsions of mirth. Florrie West, the sprightly and graceful liftle lady who has charmed us before with her airy dancing, carries much of the piece and scored a success as "Molly," the bogus opera singer. Adelaide Randall sang with much sweetness and expression. She has a fine voice, which is highly cultivated, and her art added greatly to the performance. The four shapely young women, Nellie Page, Margie Mortimer, Josephine Ditt and Midred Mosely, sang, and danced with great success, and C. Jay Williams, who was here last year with the Millionaire company, made a capital slugger as "Bolivar Knoz."

The performance, was, all snap and go, and everybody reveled in it. The same bill tonight. Get in if you want to laugh.

Coming Attractions.—Mrs. Romualdo. Pacheco's comedy, Incóg, was brilliant, so much so that one could bow his head in homage to the author of it, and the pleasure it gave will unquestionably have a sort of reflex action in compelling those who saw it to see another play bearing Mrs. Pacheco's angue. Such a play will be produced at the Grand-Operahouse Thursday, October 27, by George W. Leader's stock comedians. Its title is, Nothing But Money, and the claims made for it are that it is written in a breezy style, abounds in distinct character types and tells an amusing story of social life. The people have been chosen with great care and represent an unusual degree of merit. This organization has just connluded a successful four weeks' engagement in San Francisco. The following artists will interpret the comedy: Harry Davenport. E. L. Davehport, Louis Mann, Julian Steger, William Norris, Samuel Fisher, Alice Shepard, Dell Douglass, Tennye Poole, Grace Atwell and Nina Hawkins.

Mrs. Romualdo Pachego is the wife of ex-Gov. Pacheco of California.

Nothing But Money will be a society event. COMING ATTRACTIONS .- Mrs. Romualdo

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

HIGHLAND PARK, Oct. 24. To the Edito HIGHLAND PARK, Oct. 24.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] Your Columbian Number of THE TIMES is a splendid paper, equal, perhaps, to any newspaper enterprise in the United States. In reading the extracts from the various addresses and orations delivered at the opening of the expositions I should like to call your attention to the fact, or rather to the omission of an important fact, in these addresses. Far be it tant fact, in these addresses. Far be if from the wish of any one at this moment from the wish of any one at this moment, to detract from the great importance of the discovery of the American continent by the Genoese navigator, but these addresses, so far as they appear, have failed to note that the discoverer of America died in ignorance of the real nature of his discovery.

If my memory serves me rightly (as I have read no biography of Columbus for over forty-five pears), the discoverer never knew that he had discovered a western continent and a new world. The belief existing at that day was that the world was flat, hence the Mediterancan Sea is the Latin name-for the middle of the earth. Columbus, with a few advanced minds of hat day, believed the earth to be round, and that by sailing westward he could reach the Indies. He set sail with this design fixed in his mind.

When he landed upon San Salvador he believed that he had feached the Indies; hence, he gave the natives the name of Inhence, he gave the natives the name of Inhence, he gave the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the season of the natives the pame of Inhence, he gave the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the season of the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the natives the pame of Inhence in the season of the natives the pame of Inhence in the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native the pame of Inhence in the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native the native the native the pame of Inhence in the native t

It had never dawned upon the old world at that time that a new continent had been found, and Columbus. Instead, as our orators say, of setting sail for the discovery of a new world, died without the knowledge of the mighty importance of his discovery. covery.

It may be left for school children to investigate as to further particulars into the history of Columbus.

THE TIMES:] I have read all the letters that have appeared in the columns of THE TIMES during the last week regarding the use of the Buena Vista street bridge by the electric company.

I notice there are two objections raised: one is that the bridge is not wide enough to allow carriages to pass the street-cars on the bridge. The other is that it would be giving to a corporation the use of the bridge that was built for the accommodation of the public. By the removal of the sidewalk on one side of the bridge, as suggested by two of your correspondents, and laying it level with the rest of the bridge, as suggested by two of your correspondents, and laying it level with the rest of the bridge, would do away with the first objection. There would be one sidewalk left for the use of pedestrians, and ample room for carriages and street cars to pass. All classes of travelers could then be accommodated. In regard to the last objection I think that those who ride on street cars are as much the public as those that ride in carriages or other vehicles; where there is one that has a carriage to ride in there are fifty that ride on street cars on the walk and I think they are entitled to some-consideration in the matter. It may not be good policy to favor corporations generally, there are times, however, when it is wise to do so. If the electric company are not able to build a bridge, which they claim they are not, it would give the people of the East Side Fajik than so have the track torn up now the road is so near to completion. It would give the people of the East Side Fajik, and be of benefit to the extra Side Fajik, and be of benefit to the city generally.

The Story of Prosperity.
[Boston Journal.]
Advance sheets of the forthcoming ensus bulletin on the mechanical and manufacturing industries of the 100 chief cities of the country clearly indicate another tremendous knockdown blow for "tariff reform." The figures for the city of New York for instance are something overwhelming. They disclose a rate of growth of production and a rate of gain in wages far beyond the most confident hopes of the protectionists.

In the New York city enumeration 11,339 establishments were reported in 1880, and 25,399 in 1890. The amount of capital was $181,206,356 at the beginning, and $420,238,602 at the end of the decade. The number of hands was 227,352 and 351,757 respectively. The chall amount of waren spectively; the total amount of wages $97,030,021 and $228,537,295. The The total value from $472,926,437 in 1880 to $763, 833,923 in 1890.

These are the aggregate gains. But more significant still is the fact that the average wages per hand have increased from $427 in 1880 to $653 in 1890. or 52.93 per cent. When the details of these statistics are laid before the work ing people of New York, as they very ing people of New York, as they very soon will be in the census bulletin, the demagogues who have been trying to convince them that they were being 'robbed' and 'impoverished' by protection will be simply stricken dumb. It is an impressive contrast, presented by the New York of 1890 as compared with the New York of 1854-55, when public souphouses for the relief of laborers and mechanics were opened in every ward in the city, and thousands of starving men, women and children daily fought around the doors for food. At that time, with an immigration far smaller in numbers and better in quality than pow numbers and better in quality than now, there were 261,000 paupers in the State of New York, or one to every 13% inhabitants. That was in the State of New 10rk, or one to every 13% inhabitants. That was in the very heyday of that "tariff for revenue only" era which the Democratic party is pledged by the Chicago platform to revive. After thirty years of protection there are now only 10,000 paupers in the Empire State, or one to every 583 inhabitants.

To clinch the humilation of the Dem-To clinch the humilation of the Democracy, it is only necessary to say that Special Agent Williams, who collected these manufacturing statistics, is a strong Democrat, and that he is going over familiar ground in his investigation. For he obtained precisely the same information and compiled the same figures in the national census of ten years ago. There is no loophole left, therefore, for the disappointed and angry free-traders to accuse him of either partisan bias or official incompetency.

Blaine's Speech-The Registration in Nev York and Brooklyn-The State Wheeling into Line as a Republican State.

New York. Oct. 18 .- If such a thing as an honest election were possible in this ring-ridden town, we would have it in November. Of course it is not. Honesty and Tammany do not go well together. Both cannot prevail. will be lying and cheating and fraud at the polls. Hundreds of men will vote the Tammany ticket, not because they want to, but because if they do not they know that they will not be allowed to make a living in New York. To such an extent has this sort of thing been carried, that the effect on the vote may very well settle the result of the election. No contractor is allowed to tear up a New York street, for instance, unless he makes a tacit agreement to hire no men unless they are recommended by Tammany Hall. Thus, if a man wants to get employment on an enterprise like, say, the ployment on an enterprise like, say, the new cable railroads which are being new cable railroads which are being built, or any similar purely private undertaking which is dependent more or less on official favor, he goes for a job not to the contractors, but to Tammany Hall. Thus he sells his vote, and Tammany buys it in a way which the law cannot prevent. Every branch of public business, too, is turned into a cog in the corruption machine. Just before election Tammany always hires an exelection Tammany always hires an ex-traordinarily big force in each of the city departments, the new men being very evidently put on the pay-roll on condition that they vote the Tammany ticket. This month, for example, the street-cleaning force and the forces of the other departments have been increased by several bringleds of mencreased by several hundreds of men. That is a variety of corruption that no amount of Republican vigilance can stop. But there are other kinds which stop. But there are other kinds which have been practiced here during every campaign in which Tammany has had a hand, which Republican vigilance can stop this year, and will stop. Chief among these are colonization and repeating.

Chairman Carter the other day discovered a clause in the new election covered a clause in the new election law which commands every voter to answer every question concerning his right to vote, propounded after the first registration day by any other voter. This clause will be fully taken advantage of by carrying out a plan more studendous than any political party every attempted before. National Committeeman David Martin has had an absolutely correct directory made of the votors of covered a clause in the new election man David Martin has had an absolutely correct directory made of the votors of this city. To each of the 1137 election districts he will send, between now and election day, from two to four citizens who will, as empowered by the law, investigate every man who registers. They will see that he has given his real name; will make certain that he has registered from the address where he really lives, and will ask of him such other questions as they may see fit. It other questions as they may see fit. It is easy to see that colonization in these is easy to see that colonization in these circumstances will be attended with many difficulties, and that repeating will be unprofitably risky. This will materially reduce the Tammany majority and will doubless have a perceptible effect on the city's national vote. It will cost the Republican National Committee about $100,000 to carry out the plans but it will be well speried. out the plan; but it will be well spent.

This little joker has frightened the Tammany leaders into a picturesque rage. "The tiger is a lashing of his tail." 'So he is.

Blaine's speech at Ophir Farm sur-prised the Democrats and pleased the Republicans. America's Grand Old Man has set forever at rest the Demooratic howlings that he was sulking in his tent because of a petty feeling of jealousy. James G. Blaine is not the kind of man either to sulk or to be jealous. The Democratic mind cannot grasp the man's character. He is really and truly great. He is one of the few and truly great. He is one of the few men of either party who have actually cared more about the welfare of the Nation than about the welfare of their own political schemes. If James G. Blaine's body was as attemption as high a speaker. Kansas is said to have seven pegro editors. Blaine's body was as strong as his desire for Republican success this year, he would be making two Harrison and Reid speeches every day. His statement of the situation in which most voters find themselves this year was particularly impressive. Not only must t be apparent to them that the Demo cratic party is working more in the in-terest of England, Ireland's oppressor, than in the interest of American and Irish-American working men; but at the time President Harrison appointed Patrick Egan minister to Chile, the Democratic party insulted every Irish-man in the land by protesting on the grounds that Egan's work for Irish home rule had made him obnoxious to England and that no man who is obnoxious to England and that no man who is obnosious to England ought to be appointed to office by the United States Government; that very plainly showed the attitude of Cleveland and his followers. It will not be hard for Irishmen to choose between it and the position which President Harrison and the Republican party has chosen. publican party has chosen. The first day's registration in New York and Brooklyn showed an increase over 1888 of about 10,000, notwith standing the fact that public attention was distracted by the Columbian cele bration. A large registration is always a good sign for the Republican party. New York may almost be said to have

New York may almost be said to have wheeled into line as a surely Republican State. The only basis for Democratic hope has been the apparent apathy of the Republicans. That no longer exists. State Chairman Hackett and National Chairman Carter have been in communication with every county chairman in the State and have put them to work with a vengance. Another down man in the State and have put them to work with a vengeauce. Apathy does not exist among New York State Republicans now, but enthusiasm does. Every school district from New York to Buffalo is being thoroughly canvassed; the voters are being urged to register and the intricacies of the new ballot law are being made clear to them. Don't be afraid that the old Empire State will go wrong. She is an right.

There has been a good deal of talk in There has been a good deal of talk in the Democratic newspapers lately about election gamblers whose Cleveland money is going begging. Any Democrat who wauts to bet money on his party's candidates can find enough takers in half an honr at the Fifth Avenue Hotel to make him go down deep into his pockets. I know of three Republicans who have been trying unsuccessfully for three weeks to find some one who would cover their Harrison noney. There will be very little betting this year, simply because Democrats are afraid to bet.

That Wisconsin gerrymander case is a beautiful exemplification of Demo-cratic methods, isn't it. When the Sucratic methods, isn't it. When the Supreme Court declared their redistricting of the State illegal, they were at first at a loss what to do, for under the old and perfectly fair apportionment a Republican Legislature was certain to be elected. But Bad Boy Peck came to their rescue promptly by calling an extra session of the Legislature. This will redistrict the State precisely as it pleases, and as there is not enough time pleases, and as there is not enough time pleases, and as there is not enough time before election to carry the matter again into the courts, the vote will have to be cast on that iniquitous basis. This scheme will also enable the Democrats to steal a United States Senator. Such a crime as this, however it may help Democratic plans this year, cannot but hurt the party in the longrum.

The insane efforts that are being The insane efforts that are being made by the Democrats to get old soldiers to vote for Cleveland are doing the cause of the prophet more harm than good. A dog will lick the hand that has smitten him, but the veterans are not that kind of animals.

In the meantime, while the political In the meantime, while the political excitement is at its height, we have the unprecedented spectacle of a Presidential candidate who is taking no part in the struggle for his own election and in whose heart there is no room for either hope or fear as to its result. Benjamin Harrison, the great standard-bearer of the great Republican party, is standing in the shadow of an impending affliction which makes his political fortunes dwindle into insignificance before tunes dwindle into insignificance before his eyes. The faithful wife who has shared his sorrows and his joys, who has halved his defeats and his victories, is about to be taken away.

It looks a little bit as if another honest Democrat had developed in this State-no less a personage than Gov. Roswell P. Flower, he of the barrel.

Roswell P. Flower, he of the barrel. In a public speech at Watertown this enthusiastic Clevelandite said:

"Take my county, Jefferson. The farmers have been benefited by this measure and they know it.

It will be useless to bring any argument in our district that the McKinley law does not benefit the farmers, for it does does not benefit the farmers, for it does and the facts bear it out. There is no use of a Democrat trying to get office in that district on that issue, for it is a

Another little quotation, this time from a book written by Robert Barn-well Roosevelt, who was, at Mr. Cleveland's especial request, appointed treasurer of the National Democratic Committee, will be more interesting. I think, than political gossip. It follows: "The inhabitants of the Emerald Isle are certainly a magnificent race, especially when their biographer wants to run for alderman; and if they did not lie, steal, cheat, rob and murder, get drunk, perjure themselves, quarrel and fight, they would be almost as good

Mr. Roosevelt paid this charming little tribute to the Irish in a book on amateur farming, which he issued under the title "Five Acres Too Much." It is particularly interesting when it is remembered that its author is one of the closest friends of the present Democratic candidate for the Presidency, and presumably shares to a dency, and presumably shares to a greater or lesser degree the opinions of his chief. Mr. Roosevelt was sent as United States Minister to Holland by Mr. Cleveland in 1885. This forms a charming companion piece to the Mr. Cleveland in 1885. This forms a charming companion piece to the utterances of Democratic newspapers when President Harrison named Patrick Egan Minister to Chile. referred to by Mr. Blaine in his speech at Ophir farm.

Will Sell to the City for Two and Half Millions.

The Communication Piled Away for Future Reference.

The School Board Asking for a Loan. Street Work Ordered-Motions

The City Council met at 10 o'clock yesterday morning with President Bonsall in the chair and all the members present. The City Attorney and other officials were also in attendance, and, after the reading of the minutes, the following communication was read by

To the Mayor and Council of the city of Los Ingeles: The undersigned, directors of the los Angeles City Water Company and of he Crystal Springs Water Company, re-pectfully represent to your honorable body s follows:

as follows:

In view of the fact that among the advocates of the bond election to be held on the 2d day of November, 1892, for the purpose of raising $5.26,000 for the construction by the city of preliminary water works, etc. there appears to exist a misunderstanding in regard to the attitude and purposes of our water companies, we begleave to make the following statement and proposition:

purposes of our water companies, we beg leave to make the following statement and proposition:

First—We are not opposed to the city's owning and operating its own water works, if a majority of our citizens deem such to be the best policy of the city, and for a long time whave been, and are now, ready to sell and turn over to the city all of our water works at a fair price—less than it would cost the city to construct them. And we expressly state that we do not insist on withholding such sale until the expiration of the term of lease mentioned in the contract between the city of Los Angeles and the Los Angeles City Water Company.

We beg leave to call your attention to the written proposition to sell which was presented to a special committee of your honorable body on the 29th day of January, 1892, a copy of which is hereto attached and hereby referred to as part hereof.

And we now state that we are still willing to sell all the property mentioned in that schedule, which embraces all of the property owned or controlled by our companies, on the same terms, to wit: For the sum of $2,591,000, and cost of improvements made since date of offer amounting to the sum of $91,000, making a total of $2,591,000 (the property to be free of all incumbrances.) and take in payment therefor forty-year bonds of the city of Los Angeles, bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable every six months. And in addition we will be willing to sell and enlarging its pipes so as to turnish to the people of the western hill portion of our city an abundant supply of pure, fresh water which we have known with regret they were sorely in need of. Until lately our negotiations hare failed. We have, however, now come to an agreement with a majority of the stockholders and bondholders of that corporation for a sale to us of their water system. That agreement would be now finally consummated but for the necessary and unexpected delay caused by the death of Mrs. Wicks, one of the stockholders and bondholders of that corporation, and the necessity of waiting for the probate of her will, which is set for the 25th Inst., and some other preliminary proceedings, before her stock and bonds can be turned over to our companies. The executor in said will cannot act in regard to said stock and bonds until after the probate of the same. We have reliable assurance that this will be accomplished in due time and without delay, and then the sale will be duly consummated.

We further beg leave to assure your hon

We further beg leave to assure your honorable body that as soon as we can obtain possession of the said water works last referred to. It is our purpose—as it is clearly our interest—to proceed without delay to connect that system swith ours and to improve and operate the same so as to afford an ample supply of good, fresh water to the people now dependent upon that system. We have made the foregoing statement and proposition in good faith, and for the purpose of setting ourselves right before your honorable body, so that you may take such action on our proposition as the good judgment of your honorable body may deem proper. And also for the purpose of dispelling any such idea as has been charged—for the purpose of induencing the bond election referred to—that our companies are seeking to prevent the city from panies are seeking to prevent the city from a vigorian any water works of its own, at the time when its lease above mentioned shall expire, and when the city will be in such a condition that it would have to buy our works at such exorbitant figure as we might demand.

Me should not omit to state that the said agreement for our purchase of the system of the Citizens' Water Company is, of course, somewhat conditioned upon the result of the bond election above referred to, [Signed] W. H. PERRY, S. H. MOTT, W. J. BRODRICK, S. LAZARD.

Most of the interested property-owners are people of moderate means and they did not see any reason for going to this expense at this time. Not only this, but a very large majority are represented on the protests, and more could have been secured had they been approached. J. R. Citizens of the Second Ward: Upon the request of many friends I announce myself as a candidate for Councilman for the Second Ward, subject to the action of the Republican primaries and city convention.

I am an advocate of the speedy completion of the sewer system. I am a firm believer in the advisability of the city owning its own water system and the necessity of immediate voting of bonds for the requisite headworks for the supply of the whole city. I will support a progressive policy without regard to vested interests.

Respectfully, O. Morgas.

The principal witness for the prosecution, J. W. Jackson, not being present, several witnesses were called for the purpose of showing that he was out of the State and could not be in attendof the State and could not be in attendance. The first of these was Deputy District Attorney Diehl, who testified to the effect that he knew Jackson, and had seen him at the preliminary examination of the Monroe case. Some weeks ago he ascertained Jackson's address in Kannas City from this forwards. dress in Kansas City from his former dress in Kansas City from his former partner, W. E. Cex, and telegraphed to him, but received no reply. He then sent a second message, to which Jackson responded: "Cannot come; have written." A letter was subsequently received from him to the effect that he had just started in business in Kansas City and was unable to leave there, but that his testimony, which had been that his testimony, which had been taken upon the preliminary examination

W. E. Cox, Esq., briefly testified that he and Jackson had formerly been in partnership together, and that he, therefore, knew Jackson's caligraphy. He identified the letter to the District. He identified the letter to the District Attorney as in Jackson's handwriting.
Assistant District Attorney McComas then took the stand and testified tha then took the stand and testified that he also wrote to Jackson, requesting him to come back to Los Angeles, but that the absent witness refused to do so in much the same terms as those used in his letter to Diehl.

The Court thereupon allowed the prosecution to introduce Jackson's deposition in evidence, in spite of the vigorous objections of the defendant's counsel, and Mr. McComas proceeded to read that important document to the the effect that he was an attorney-at-law, residing at Pasadena. That on or about January 1 last the defendant Munroe was introduced to him in his office in the Los Angeles National Bank tion they then had Munroe stated that he was discounting warrants, and that if Jackson would furnish the money he would do the work, and they could then share the profits. The result of this inshare the pronts. The result of this interview was that Jackson did furnish Munroe with money, and the latter bought warrants, discounted them and gave them to the attorney. When Jackson demanded his money Munroe gave him a check, but upon presentation at the bank payment was refused, as there were no funds to his credit there Munroe then took up the check, giving Jackson $1000 worth of orders due or rental be made $25 per annum for the last five years, and $50 per annum for the last five.

The amendment was voted down and the original motion prevailed by a vote of 7 to 2.

On the evening of March 28 Jackson called on Munroe at his office in the Bryson-Bonebrake Block and demanded immediate payment of his money, but the defendant told him that the cash was in the vaults of the State Loan and Trust Company, and that he would give it to him at 9 o'clock next would give it to him at 9 o'clock next morning. When Jackson called at that hour he learned that Munroe was sick in bed, and his suspicions were further aroused when City Treasurer Johnson sent him word that there was something wrong with the Henry order, and de-manded that the money be refunded. He repaid the money and subsequently He repaid the money, and subsequently the rebaid the money, and subsequently turned all the orders over to Cox, by whom they were given back to Munroe, who gave him a certified check for the amount due to Jackson in return for them.

Large and Enthusiastic Water Meeting Last Night.

City Engineer Dockweiler Explains His Plans at Length.

Mayor Hazard Handled the Attorney-General Without Gloves.

The Intentions of That Official Questioned and His Veracity Impeached by City Attorney McFarland and Upward of 700 people were gathered at Turnverein Hall last night at the mass-meeting to consider the matter of the issuance of bonds to the amount of $526,00 for the building of water works to be owned by the city.

Sam J. Chappell called the assembly to order, and after reading a long list of vice-presidents, who were invited forward and given seats on the plat ferm, he introduced City Engineer Dockweiler as the first speaker. Dockweiler spoke at some length, go-ing into the details of the proposed system of which he may be said to be the father, and explaining every point in a manner to convince the most skeptical, of the inestimable value and unquestioned stability of a plant such as contemplated. Every point, he said, had been considered, from the se-lection of an adequate and never-failing of supply and the location of e works to the smaller items of surface works to the smaller than of street and house distribution, with due allowance for the exigencies arising from fires, etc. The system, as pro-jected, would furnish 1.800,000 gal ons of water daily, or enough to supply population of 194,000 with an abund nce for all purposes. In the course of is remarks Mr. Dockweiler waxed elohis remarks Mr. Dockweiler waxed elo-quent and wound up with a burst of mingled prose and verse, which com-pletely won his hearers and imparted to them in a large degree the enthusiasm which he himself felt, and which they anifested by uproarious applause.

Mayor Hazard followed. He said: "In the considerations of this water prob-lem I am reminded of some lines I learned as a boy: 'Upon what meat do these our Cæsars feed, that they are rown so great? The water company aims to have expended $2,500,000 the plan now in operation, and yet ness is not a profitable one they the business is not a profitable one they say. I ask myself and you, my hearers, upon what meat do they feed? Where did they get this immense sum of money? Out of their own pockets! I think not, for I knew the men who started the enterprise and they never had that much money of their own."

terprise and they never had that much money of their own. The Mayor was very vehement in his denunciation of Atty -Gen. Hart for the stand taken with reference to the sale of the city bonds, and for the letter written by that official to the City Council. The Attorney-General, he said, had denied that he had received money from the City Water Company, but he did not believe him, which statement brought forth a shout from the audience, which embodened the Mayor to lean forward and declare that he was not afraid to make this statement openly, and he put himself squarely on openly, and he put himself squarely on ord as in favor of his immediate im. He was followed by Street Superintendent Hutchinson, who said there was, in his opinion, but one side to the uestion and but one thing to do, i. e., ote for the bonds. Resolutions by the First Voters Republican Culp were read indexing the City Attorney C. McFarland then spoke on the question of the city's legal right to issue bonds, of which he claimed there was not the slightest doubt. The Attorney C. McFarland then ceed $6,000,000 and so far about $1,000,000 has been issued. He went into the history of the City Water Company in detail from the time of its first organization in 1868, and made a strong argument in favor of the purse of the plant at the expiration the company's lease, six years bence. In the meantime let the laid for a system of water-works that would be of permanent value and importance to the city as a whole.

Health Officer McGowan was called

Outlook for the Democratic City Convention Today.

The Situation as to the Mayoralty Contest Decidedly Mixed-Candidates Ciniming Everything in Sight. The County Meetings.

seems to be forgotten for the time being in the excitement growing out of the municipal battle which, opening on on Saturday with the primary election, will culminate today, at least so far as that party is concerned, in the nominacratic City Convention, which meets in Turnverein Hall at 10 o'clock. The situation so far as the Mayoralty contest is concerned is decidedly mixed. Each of the leading candidates claims to have enough predged votes to elect on the first ballot, but close ob-servers think it will take three or four ballots to determine the result. Meanwhile all kinds of rumors are affoat as to trades which have or will be made, and a hot fight is an assured fact. In each of the nine wards the fight on Councilman will be hotly contested owing to the number of aspirants for nonors and the desire of the

The battle will open with the selection of permanent chairman, and it is generally conceded that the main test of the strength of the different candi-dates for Mayor will be practically set-tled by the result of this contest. Tammany Hall will be largely represented on the floor, and they claim to have a good working majority made up from the so-called short hair end of it. The conservative element of the party have organized to sit down on the Tammany combination, but stand but small chance of success, as the boys

THE COUNTY FIGHT From now until the close of the campaign the speakers sent out by the County Committee will devote their time to answering with facts and figures the studied misstatements of the Democracy, which have been their only argument in this campaign. They have falsified the figures taken from the coonty records and in every way endeavored to so juggle the truth as to mislead and confuse the voters. In no cingle, instance, have they extend a feet in the control of the contr which can be supported by evidence or which can be supported by evidence or which cannot be disproved; and from now on an answer will be furnished for every statement which has or will be made by their speakers.

There will be business of importance affecting the selection of a Councilman to be voted for at the primary election on October 29, which should command the personal attention of every taxpayer in the ward. The meeting will be called to order at 8 p.m.

p.m. THE LEGISLATIVE CONTEST. The Legislative fight will be a feature of the campaign in each of the districts from now until November 8, and no effort should be spared to elect a solid delegation from Los Angeles county. #### SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—[Special to THE TIMES.] The market for fresh fruits is in tolerably fair condition with prices well sustained in the general run of variewell sustained in the general run of varieties. Table grapes -move off slowly and large quantities of wine grapes on hand are practically unsalable. The wet weather has rotted these grapes in some of the principal wine producing districts to such an extent that the crop, small in the first instance, has been reduced fully one-third.
Good, apples are fairly active. Melons are plentiful for all kinds, but sales are slow.

slentiful for all kinds, but sales are slow, some plums came in today.

In vegetables there is little change to resort. Receipts of potatoes were heavy this morning, but the demand is very slack, bulons are firmer. Okra and green pepers are in good demand. Green corn still comes in, but the demand is light. Sweet comes in, but the demand is light. Sweet potatoes are duil.

Fresh butter continues duil and weak. Eggs are in good supply and fully equal to the demand in all except choice ranch. Dried fruits are in liberal supply and meet with rather poor fiquity.

was the biggest celebration of the cam was the biggest celebration of the campaign, and no mistake. The occasion was the speech of hon. Irving M. Scott, the noted ship builder of San Francisco. The Republican rally preceding the speech was a hummer, and no mistake. About 6 o'clock the anvils began to boom, and kept up the firing until the procession began to form at 7 o'clock. The parade was by far the biggest one ever in Pomona. It was headed by the Ninth Regiment hand, and just before it started off the Lordsburg club came in with transparencies and a fife ard drum corps. The scene was one of great enthusiasm, and everybody shouted that the old-time enthusiasm had come again. Along the route of the procession, especially on Second street, the sidewalks were lined with people, and only occasionally could you hear some "kid" yell for Cleveland. It was decidedly the Republicans' time to how!, and they howled, Many of the houses along the route of the procession were brilliantly lighted up with Ch' 'se lanterns, and after marching along the principle streets all turned out to the Operahouse to listen to the speech of the Hon. Mr. Scott. Many of the cld residents said the procession elipsed any thing ever seen in Pomona, and the enthusiasm and paign, and no mistake. The occasion was Hon. Mr. Scott. Many of the cid residents said the procession eclipsed any thing ever seen in Pomona, and the enthusiasm and numbers of the Republicans made one rise to remark, "Where are the Democrats at?" Mr. Scott may well feel proud of his reception in this city. And in passing it may be eminently proper to remark, that as there were a great many more Republicans in line than ever before in the history of the city, the Democrats and Populists can't make much of a show this year. It is a Republican year and no mistake, anyhow. At the time of sending in this report the Social and Literary--Prof. A. L. Hamilton, S. F. Johnson, Walter Graves.

Reports are about to the effect that "Jack-the-squeezer" has transferred his field of operations from Pomona to this city. Two ladies are said to have found favor in the villain's sight and been caught his amorous grasp. It does seem strange that the officers cannot capture this scoundrel. The fact of his presence in this city has directed the attention of the reidents to the fact that many parts of the city are poorly lighted, and the many street trees and much shrubbery, with much of the cypress hedge causes many ladies to shrink from passing along many streets, even in day time. The lack of electric light has been the cause of much complaint on the part of the ladies.

Extensive boring is being done at Box Springs, and several tunnels will be run from shafts to be sunk for the purpose, the object being to secure an independent water supply for the Riverside Heights district. Water has been found at a depth of seventy feet, but not in any great quantity. It is hoped that a tunnel may find an underground stream of sufficient volume to produce a flow of several hundred inches of water, or enough to water the heights.

ONTARIO. By a typographical error in Monday's TIMES Ontario's present water supply is spoken of as "an eighth of an Inch to ten spoken of as "an eighth of an inch to ten acres." The item should have read "an inch to ten acres." This is the usual water right in Southern California, being that of Pomona, South Riverside and other localities. Ontario, however, being one of the most enterprising fruit colonies in the State, and being preëminently a citrus colony, has decided on doubling the already excellent supply. The purchase of several hundred inches of water is not a thing to be done in a day, but the matter is being taken in hand in a way that means business. Extensive preparations are being made for the Republican meeting on Wednesday evening. Judge Wilde of Ventura and Lyman Evans of San Bernardino will speak and the San Bernardino Giec Club will sing.

RHODE ISLAND HAS PRODUCED MEN WHO HAVE DONE MUCH.

A Notable List of Inventors, with Some of Their Best Known Machines-How Aza Arnold Was Cheated Out of the Royalties of His "Compound Motion."

During the past hundred years the in-ventors of Rhode Island have contributed largely to the present perfection of the machinery used in modern shops and mills. Some of them have more than a state or a national reputation, and the value of their inventions has been recognized wherever power has been applied to machinery, both at home and abroad. The inventor of the slide lathe, Daniel Wilkinson, was a Rhode Island man, who, having made nothing out of his universally used device, was paid $10,000 by congress a few years before his death because the government had adopted the mechanism for its shops. The inventor of the braiding machine was a native of this state, and like Wilkinson he lived to see others accumulate fortunes by manufacturing the machine of his inome of them have more than a state or by manufacturing the machine of his is terial alterations have been universally employed upward of seventy years. One of these is Aza Arnold, a ploneer manufacturer of Rhode Island and an inventor whose name was perhaps more prominent than that of any other man interested in cotton mills fifty years ago.

Aza Arnold was the son of Benjamin Arnold, one of the Providence county people of that name, and Isabella, daughter of Paul Greene, of Potowomut Neck. He was born at Pawtucket in 1789, and learned the carpenter's trade with John Smith, of Wickford, but afterward was a machinist, and in 1812 operated the Butterfly factory in company with George Smith, who was his uncle by marriage. Their business was making woolen blankets. At this time he invented the "endless roving" for carding machines, Previous to this all roving was made by the carding machines in short rolls, which had to be pieced tooches. in short rolls, which had to be pieced to gether in spinning. Fifty or sixty years ago there were scattered over the counago there were scattered over the coun-try, wherever there was a 1-horse water power, carding machines that worked up the farmers' wool into these short roils of roving to be spun into a yarn on the farm-er's hand spinning machine.

At this date, 1812, owing to the war with Fardland it was impossible to import files.

England, it was impossible to import files, and he invented a machine for cutting them, upon which files were made for their them, upon which files were made for their own use and for sale; but it was dropped at the close of the war, when it became possible to import them again. In 1818 he invented the "compound motion," or, as he called it, the "differential motion" mechanism for compounding two different motions or rates of speed to produce a third rate that should be the constant dif-ferential of the two, however much they might change or differ.

This was, as Zerah Colburn, the great This was, as Zerah Colburn, the great arithmetician, expressed it, solving by mechanism an arithmetical problem that could not be solved by figures, because of their running into series of circulating decimals. This motion he applied to the speeder, a machine used to prepare cotton roving for spinning, and patented it in 1823. Its value was quickly appreciated, as it enabled the manufacturer to turn off three skeins where he formerly had two, and the quality of the products was imand the quality of the products was improved almost in the same ratio. It was testified in court by prominent manufacturers that it was worth to them five doilars per spindle per annum. It was quickly adopted, and some Rhode Island annufacturers paid a royalty, but the Lowell and the Fall River companies remed, and suits were brought against them. The objection of the opposition was that a negative expression in one part of the specification was not repeated in anthe specification was not repeated in another part, and Judge Story said to the counsel for defense, "If that is your only objection Mr. Arnold can surrender his patent and have that corrected, and come back here in two weeks ready to go on with the trial."

He 'then proceeded to argue that the consumers necessarily paid the tariff consumers necessarily paid the tariff taxes, after which he cited as an instance the San Diego man buying a horse in Lower California for $30, upon which he was compelled to pay $30 duty, and because the horse was worth no more than abroad he argued that it necessarily followed that the tax was paid by the American purchaser.

The address was closed after a strong plea made for Bennett for the Assembly and Manley for the Senate.

All of these were practical, but his most successful invention was a machine for making seines and nets for fishing. These were built in a number of ways, and the first patents were sold to a Baltimore firm in 1854. Since the expiration of the patents Mr. Arnold has built these machines for American and foreign manufacturers, shapments having been made to Baltimore. Chicage, Richmond, North Carolina, Glasgow, Scotland, and Barcelona, Spain. The ideas embodied in the netting machine are entirely original with Mr. Arnold, and a single machine with a girl to attend it will produce more netting in a day than each be turned out by forty hand knitters.—

Deaths of Wild Animals.

The circumstances that attend the illness and death of wild animals are perhaps less well known than any other part of their history. Yet when we consider that animal life, though in some species of great duration, is naturally brief and liable to an infinite number of accidents without remedy and sudden dangers unforeseen, the subject of the last days of the nobler sorts of beasts has a certain pathetic interest. No doubt all animals, from the healthy and natural lives they lead, have strange powers of self cure in case of accident. Those whose profession it is to popare the skeletons of wild beasts, large a small, for museums and laboratories speck Deaths of Wild Animals. small, for museums and laboratories speak with surprise of the number of injure and fractures which the bones exhibit, b and fractures which the bones exhibit, but which have set themselves in a rough but effective fashion.

But the "chapter of accidents" in animal life spares none, from the stags which die with horus locked together on the mountain side to the locusts which impale themselves upon the barbed wire of the Transval farms, or the cicales which repul Transvaal farms, or the cicales which rend their wings upon the thorns of the mimosa. Death by violence seems to be the rule in the lower forms of animal life, except

A hot contest was about to take place years ago in a country town, the candidates being a Legitimist, an Orleanist and a Republican. One Saturday morning people ran up to the wife of the Orleanist politician with the exclamation that "All was lost." as the Legitimist rival was going to present every poor member of the congregation with a 4-pound loaf after divine service on the following day. The lady reflected a moment, and then said that she would be equal to the occasion. She kept her word. As the people filed out of the church on a Sunday morning the Legitichurch on a Sunday morning the Legiti mist candidate distributed his bread, but mist candidate distributed his bread, but posted on the other side of the door the Orleanist's wife presented to the recipients of the 4-pound loaves a pat of butter or a pot of jam. As it turned out the wily Republican carried the day after all. #### IN SOCIAL SPHERES.

CLOVER LEAF BALL The first monthly ball of the Clover Leaf Club for the season of 1892-3, which was given last Friday evening at Kramer's new hall, was one of the most successful that popular club has ever given. The forty-five members of the club, with their partners, filled the beautiful new hall comfortably, and danced to the fine music furnished for the occasion with renewed vigor after their summer vacation. The gathering contained the cream of the young society people of Los Angeles, and as a whole, was an exceptionally brilliant affair. Some of those noticed present were the following: Misses Davis, Rendall, Kinsey, Cook, Royer, Bond, Huntley, Will, Bowman, Davis, James, Tibbot and Hartwig: Messrs. W. P. Jeffries, E. C. # Steady Success!

The public like to trade with a successful house; they like to trade where there are crowds, for it evinces a bold truth—where there are crowds there are bargains. People cannot be fooled all the time; some crowds there are bargains. People cannot be fooled all the time; some merchants know this to their sorrow; they can run along for a spell till they awaken to the truth that their trade has discovered his faking and they leave his store empty and trade elsewhere. If the merchant is elever he learns by experience, but some merchants are so bull-headed they buck at the ground, and while throwing dirt in their own eyes think they can do the same with their patrons. Honest methods will win. This house does business in a straight, honest, honorable manner—you can come to us with confidence. All goods exchanged and money refunded.

D. D. Parton, a member of the brass band which was engaged for the night of the celebration, was then called. There was a large crowd on the ground on the night of the accident. Charles Vonderkuhlen was called, and told his experience at the scene of the accident, but no new circumstances were developed through his testimony. The Coroner then had the written statement of Herman Cammert, the assistance of Wilson was considered.

statement of Herman Cammert, the assistant of Wilson, who was too badly injured to be present, read. The gist of it was that Wilson had done all in his power to protect his works from the crowd by ropes and railway ties. There were no policemen on the ground, though the Spanish and Italian people had promised that there should be. Cammert had never loaded a bomb, Mr. Wilson always doing that work, as it was a very particular job.—He had left for a moment the bomb which he was preparing to fire and thought that some boy or hoodlum had poured an extra quantity of powder into the mortar which produced such frightful results. The bombs were prepared with a cone of powder on the under side and lowered into the mortar with a string, the fuse extending out the top.

Herbert Barnes of No. 940 Maple avenue told how the bombs were made to the jury, as he had frequently seen Mr. Wilson was then brought in and placed on the stand. Mr. Wilson said he was a manufacturer of fireworks and that he had signed a contract to furnish the display of fireworks for the Columbus day celebration. He recounted the preparations he had made for protecting the ground by ropes and railroad ties from the crowd that would gather. He then related his side of the story of the accident, as already published in The Tines, and identified the box exhibited by the Coroner as the one which contained the powder with he had missed from his materials, but he said the powder it contained was only about one-half of the quantity which he had left in it.

Several other experiments were tried and it was proven without a doubt that the mortars are nothing more or less than infernal machines, and any one who uses them is liable to commit murder at any moment.

There is no doubt that the San Juan accident, which occurred during the Union League festivities, when one man's leg was frightfully shattered, was caused by placing a bomb upside down in the mortar. On that occasion the mortar was used by a man who knew nothing about it, and he placed the bomb in upside down.

The experiments vesterday prove the bomb in unside down.

The experiments yesterday prove one of two things: Either some one poured a lot of black powder into both of the mortars without Wilson or his assistant's knowledge, or Wilson placed the bombs in the two four-inch mortars upside down, thinking a bigger noise would be the result, as a number of the people were clamoring for more noise. If he did place them upside down it is easy to account for his remark when they were touched off: "I wont be responsible for this charge," for he did not know exactly what the result would be should the bombs explode in the mortars.

In either case he is guilty of criminal negligence, for he knew that his powder had been tampered with just before the explosion, and it was his duty to see that nothing had been placed in the mortars before he used them, and if he placed the bombs in the mortars upside down for experimental purposes his crime is still greater, for he had no business to experiment where thousands of people stood packed around him like a band of sheep.

It is probable that a law will be presented at the next Legislature making it a felony for any one to use mortars of this kind at any fireworks display. It is very certain that they will never again be used in this city.

[Stockton Mall.]

The saloon question becomes very interesting in Jewett City, Conn. That town has not had a saloon in a quarter of a century. Now a wealthy liquor-dealer proposes to start one. There is in the Nutmeg State a law providing that liquor shall not be sold within a certain distance of a schoolhouse. Accordingly the temperance people propose to put a schoolhouse on wheels and move it to the vicinity of the grogshop. The owner will counter by putting his place on wheels, and it will be a question of whether schoolhouse or saloon can be moved the faster. The difference between this case and a well-known one can be easily told:

Mary had a little lamb.

The hearing of testimony in the innight's fearful accident was resumed at 10 o'clock yesterday morning before Coroner Weldon and a jury in Justice Stanton's courtroom. But few really new facts were developed other than have already been published, although the general tendency of the evidence introduced went to show that Wilson, the pyrotechnist, could not be held directly to blame for the disaster, as he had re-peatedly urged the crowd not to press in upon his work, warning them that if they did, they would most likely be

The Charming Mile. Barlet, Sara Bernhardt's Rival.

Paris, Oct. 15 .- Mile. We shoul not have lingered over the description we should help better to know the woman; this great artist, who is so little artist in the Bohemian sense, frequently conveyed by the word; who is on the contrary so refined, delicate and almost fairy-like!

The commencement of Mile. Barlet' career was difficult and laborious. He vocation declared itself, so it is re-lated, from her tenderest infancy. When quite a child she had been taken to the Comedie Francaise and Had there seen Musset's play of In ne Badine pas ancel'Amour (Love is not to be trifled with.) She never slept all night and henceforward dreamed only of the theater.

The actor Delaunay was an acquaintnce of the family. He had often tossed perhaps an influence on the child's tastes! She admired him, and we know how first impressions strike deep into a child's mind and what ravage is made when once the idea of becoming a great artist has penetrated. As a young girl she was possessed with the desire to

There was under the church porch an old beggar-man, to whom she habitually gave a son, saying: "Pray for me; it will bring me good fortune, and I shall be-

At the age of 16, in 1871, she entered the Conservatoire in Regnier's class. In 1872, at the end of her first year, she signed an engagement at year, she signed an engagement at the Vaudeville, where she remained eight years, and in 1880 joined the Comedie Francaise. Exquisite and tender in the classical, full of charm, grace and penetrating sweetness, she has realized in it the greatest success, but where she has especially shown herself unrivaled is in the modern—the theater of Dumas the country. In "Denies" in "Franciilon" younger. In "Denise," in "Francillon" she was incomparable. In these characters of the woman of our times he acters of the woman or our times her modernity could give itself free course. She is just that creature, young, intelligent, nervous, perhaps eccentric, as Dumas himself admits, but of proud and noble race, the thoroughbred horse whom one must touch lightly.

The Writing Trade.
[Sacramento Record Union.]
Pierre Lotti, in the Forum, holds 'if man believes he has some talent for riting, let him write; a writer should o what he wishes to do, and do it in his own way, and be directed by no master or the rule of any school, no matter how great." And he adds with a vigor and fervency that is very re-reshing:

"What an author has written in this "What an author has written in this way, whether it be memoir, phantasy, romance, drama, poem, or any other name vou please, whether it can or cannot be put into as school catalogue, whether it have or have not success with the mob, all this is immaterial; for all true lovers of artistic work will surely recognize it if they flud in it the surely recognize it if they find in it the breath of life, without which nothing can exist for them." Lotti is to be commended for this pro-test against the attempt to develop writing ability by rule and school. Mere dexterity may be acquired, and correctness of language, gramatically and otherwise, cultivated, but the truest rule for and shortest road to finalresults and sound judgment of merit is to let those who think they can write it will be known by its ring; if there is genius it will write its signature on every particle of work it does; if there is art it will command recognition. is nonsense to say that a writer can attach himself to this or that school of attach nimsel to this of that scaool of style. His place will develop in his work. Grace of manner he may add, but fixity of purpose and true capacity will achieve success, while mediocrity and unfitness will dig their own graves, and all the cultivation that artificial means may employ will not make a writer out of base metal.

Ancient Proofreading.

The editions of books printed 200 or 300 years ago are almost entirely free from typographical errors, which may be attributed to the fact that early publishers were generally eminent scholars, and themselves gave much attention to the revision of their proofs. After reading the proofs they frequently turned them over to other scholars with the request to revise and correct, and as the printer's time was then deemed a matter of small consequence a perfection was attained which is seldom equaled by modern printers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DOWN IN A SALT MINE

WHAT MEN DO THERE OVER A THOU SAND FEET UNDER GROUND.

Experience of Two Men Who Visited the Dismal Place-Tunnels Lighted by Tallow Candles Which Are Bought in Carlonds-An Underground Village.

As our readers are aware, we have been working for the past three or four years to get a pass down into to the Retsof salt mine at York. It so happened one day recently that two personal friends had business down in the mine, and meeting us afterward they gave us a very graphi description of the trip, so much so that we almost imagined we were with them from the time they left the top until they re-turned again, and for the benefit of our readers we will give their description of what they experienced and what they saw. They said:

They said:

You may imagine that you would like to go down that shaft, but let us tell you that when you once stood on the verge of that yawning hole waiting for the car to that yawning hole waiting for the car to let you down, it is two to one that your courage would fail you, and you would inform the guide that you would, postpone the trip until some other day. Superintendent Chapin was the one who went with us, and of course there was no cause for alarm, as he knows the workings of the whole plant from one end to the other. Well, we jumped into the car and waited for the signal to start, and we did not for the signal to start, and we did no have to wait long before the gong sounded, and that was the signal to let her go. From that time until we reached the bot-tom no man will ever be fully able to de tom no man will ever be fully able to de-scribe the experience.

After the first 200 or 300 feet there is a feeling it would be hard to explain, sort of a goneness, as it were, and you don't care much whether school keeps or not, and the changes are so different and varied that changes are so different and varied that one begins to wonder what will come next.

When near the bottom the car on which you are riding begins to slow up, and then comes the most peculiar experience of all. You imagine that you are shooting upward and that you will soon be among the stars. You can imagine the sensation stars. You can imagine the sensation from going down at the rate of about 100 miles a minute to going up at about seven times that rate. Finally the car lands at the bottom of the shaft, and you breathe the bottom of the shaft, and you breathe a sigh of relief as you step out. Well, the first thing you do is to look for salt; it's there, all around you, above, be-neath, on all sides, but it don't look much like salt near the bottom of the shaft, as lights are burned constantly and the smoke has blackened the walls. You look away to the east, through a long, dark el, and you discern in the far distance tunnel, and you discern in the far distance some flickering lights, and you are in-formed that they are lights used by the workmen who are engaged in mining the salt. Your guide steps up to a man near where you land and says, "Three lights, please," and three tailow candles are hand-ed out. It may seem a little strange that tailow candles are used in this age of kero-tone, gray and electricity, but such is the sene, gas and electricity, but such is the sene, gas and electricity, but such is the case, and they are the only lights used in the mine, and each man carries one, and they are hung up from the ceiling where the mining of salt is going on, and they are the handlest lights that can be used. They don't purchase these lights by the dozen or hundred, but by the carload.

The candles were lighted and with

The candles were lighted, and with them in hand we followed the guide and them in hand we followed the guide and proceeded to make a tour of the mine, we might add a partial tour, for it would take a person something like a week to walk all over the mined territory. We followed the guide along through dark and winding pathways until we reached a point where the workmen were busily engaged mining the sait. They were not at work with They were not at work with picks picking it out, as might be supposed, but were breaking up the large lumps and out were breaking up the large lumps and shoveling it into the cars, the salt having been blasted out shead of them. While some were engaged in shoveling the salt, others were drilling holes into the solid mass, making ready for a blast, machines run by compressed air being used for this purpose.

directly east and is nearly a half mile in length. Near the shaft two other tunnels branch off from the main tunnel, one on branch off from the main tunnel, one on either side, and run parallel with it. These we believe are termed airshafts. From these shafts rooms branch off both north and south, and in these rooms is where the sait is mined. These rooms are nothing more nor less than short tunnels, and in time will probably be lengthened out as far as the main tunnel or even farther, as there can up miles in any direction and they can go miles in any direction and still be in the salt. The rooms are perhaps twenty or thirty feet wide, and from seven twenty or thirty feet wide, and from seven to eight feet in height. A section of salt some thirty feet in thickness is left between each room as a support to the solid mass alove. A thickness of five or six feet is left above as a roof, and a substantial roof it makes, as the salt in its natural state is almost as hard as rook. There are state is almost as hard as rock. There are that are left.

Of these rooms mentioned there are fifty or sixty at the present time, and the work-men are distributed about, working in several rooms at a time. There is no neces-sity of a foreman in each room, as the num-ber of carloads of salt delivered at the shaft tells the tale as to whether the men are shighing their duty or not. A relivery are shirking their duty or not. A railway runs through the main tunnel and branches extend in all directions. The cars are hauled from the several rooms by large powerful nules, and there are some thirty of these in the mine.

powerful nules, and there are some thirty of these in the mine.

There is a blacksmith's shop in the mine where the tools are repaired and the nules are shod, and there is also a large stable where the nules are sheltered during the night. Of course they would be well sheltered in the mine, anyway, but if allowed to roam about they could find nothing to to tail about they count and the fails to the average mule cannot exist on a diet of this kind. This stable is far ahead of the ordinary stables about the country, and there is every convenience and luxury for his muleship. The stables are some forty or fifty feet in length and twenty or thirty feet wide, with wood floor and wooden stalls and managers. This is the only combustible substance there is about the mine, and there are no exposed lights anywhere about it. Directly in the rear of the stables is what is known as the barnyard. This is a large room cut in the solid salt, and here the nules are turned out for recuperation. One may imagine that a salt mine is a bad place to work, but aside from the fact that it is a little dismal, there are no bad eat but salt and the railroad track, and the

that it is a little dismal, there are no bad features about it. Unlike a coal mine, it is clean, and there is almost an even ten is clean, and, there is almost an even tem-perature the year around, ranging from 58 to 60 degs, wister and summer. The ven-tilation is perfect, and the system for sup-plying fresh air is not excelled by any mine in the world. In some of the passage-ways the air rushed through with such velocity as to extinguish the lights.—Gene-seo Democrat.

seo Democrat. Potato Traditions

When potatoes were first introduced into Russia by a Mr. Rowland (the exact date of the introduction of the tuber into that benighted country being a subject of con troversy, but usually set down at 1791) the people would neither plant nor touch them. They declared them to be the devil's fruit, and that they were given to his satanic majesty on his complaint to God that he had no fruit. God told him to "search the earth for food." Whereupon the devil fell to digging in the earth and found potatoes growing therein.

A similar legend seems to have obtained credit among the staid Britishers in Berwickshire, England. In that shire the in traduction of potatoes is popularly attributed. of the introduction of the tuber into the

Michael was to manage the farm, the devil the capital. The produce was to be divided in the following manner:

The produce was to be divided in the following manner:

The first year Michael was to have all that grew above the ground and the devil all that grew above the ground and the devil all that grew above the ground and the devil all that grew beneath the surface. The second year shares were to be divided in just the opposite way. His satanic majesty strange to say was badly beaten by the wily Michael, for that personage with true Scottish foresight gowed all the land to wheat the first year and planted dil in potatoes the second. So the poor devil got nothing but stubble and potato tops. How these absurd legends originated no one seems to know, but the fact remains that the peasants of both Russia and England even to this day frequently allude to potatoes as "Devil's fruit."—Chicago Inser-Ocean.

That signified that his excellency Governor Russell was on board the flagship. The flag, however, is one that but few have seen. Commodore Gerry, who has about everything nautical and otherwise upon his wonderful craft, did not have a Massachusetts flag. Thereby hangs a tale.

According to yachting etiquette, as de-termined by the gallant commodore, the state colors should occupy the position of honor aloft. The trouble was where to honor aloft. The trouble was where to find such a flag.

It was not considered a difficult thing to find one, and Commodore Gerry dispatched Mr. Ronolds, his aid, to Boston on the mission to secure one Monday. That gentleman visited the various-yacht out fitting and flagmakers' stores where such things might be found, but with no success. No one had such a flag or knew where one could be obtained.

In perpicatity Mr. Ronolds reported his ill success to the commodore. That distinguished yachtsman, who is a great stickler for perfect form, determined that one must be secured at the expenditure of

He sent his aid to the city again, and that gentleman in the progress of his search came across Governor Russell. He explained what he was after. He had previously ascertained that it would take two days to make a flag. The governor and the semiflag officer put their two heads together and thought.

Wasn't there a state flag somewhere in the whole commonwealth? was the momentous question, and if so, where was it? The governor grasped an idea first. "Why, Adjutant General Dalton must have one at the statehouse of course." So

The commodore's aid was in a pretty fix. He returned to Marblehead, where some one suggested that possibly ex-Governor henjamin F. Then General Butler said:

Inherited Taste.

Boson, a collie pup, was only two months old when I took him with me to Strat havon, and until then he had never beheld a sheep at close quarters. For three or four days I kept him tied up close to my tent, but on the fourth day he got away and followed me and my big dog Sancho down to the gate of the paddock, where I had just driven about 150 rams.

On reaching them I found I had left my fence tools behind and rode back after them, Sancho following. I did not notice that Boson remained behind. When I came back in a few minutes, I saw, to my surprise, that the rams had not spread out Inherited Taste.

The average 'cyclist looks as if he had been sent out to subpecua a coroner's jury for his own inquest: His gaze is fixed about the miles up the road, his lips are set, and the corners of his mouth are drawn down until his facial expression is a mixture of grim determination and utter despair.

grim determination and utter despair.

Our correspondent wants to know why this is thus, and the query is a natural
one. It may be answered, Yankee fashion, by another question: Is it not a fact that the average American always makes a grim and serious business of his recreation? Is it not a fact that he seldom smiles (in the literal sense of the word) when he 'is alone? Is it not true that even when he sallies forth for gregarious enjayment, a 'is alone? Is it not true that even when he sallies forth for gregarious enjoyment, as it were, on lakeside picnic or distant excursion bent, he makes harder work of it than haying or harvesting? Is it not a fact patent to every good observer that there is too much deadly earnestness and too little laughter in our American life, and is it not true that many of us are never a miserable as when pretending to have a

No Discussing of Tastes. Here is a sketch of Lobengula as drawn by Lieutenant H. Crichton-Browne in his paper read to the British association: "He is a very jolly old colored gentleman with a broad, good natured countenance, cap-able of unpleasant contortions no doubt, but still good natured on the whole, and but still good natured on the whole, and with a huge and unwieldy body. He has comparatively small hands and feet and an air of dignity that distinguishes him from even his highest Induna and markshim out as being every pound a king. Lobengula is a gentleman, and not, as has been affirmed, repulsive in appearance."

Mr. Crichton-Browne's tolerance for the king does not appear to have extended to the king's wives.

He met the head wife on the way and thought her very ugly. But it cannot be too often remembered that there are two sides to all these questions of taste. Mr. Maguire—so the story runs—nearly lost his life at Lobengula's kraal because he carried some eau de cologno with him. ried some eau de cologne with him. "What's this?" asked the king, sniffing "What's this?" asked the king, sniffing suspiciously at the white man's bottle, "it stinks." A Zulu—one of Cetawayo's men—who had been among white men in past times, was able to explain, "King!" quoth he, "the white man like the stink of that bottle!" "H'm!" says Lo Ben, "that accounts for them smelling so vi'ely!"—Pall Mall Gazette.

Hat Etiquette in Parliament

Nowhere is the unwritten law of fashion Nowhere is the unwritten law of fashion in regard to head covering more strict than at Westminster. The chimney pot is de rigueur. A man may give his fancy considerable play in the matter of clothes, but the great hat ordinance must be observed. The only concession made is in the case of the messengers of the opposition whips, who wear the plebeian billycock. But this is not because the men themselves prefer the more humble headgear. They are compelled to wear it, presumably as a badge of the fallen condition of their employers, and when the government changes hands the when the government changes hands the messengers of the two parties will, meta-phorically speaking, change hats. To the hater of the tail hat the worst of all this is

Should you chance to offend against this rule you are soon made aware of your delinquency by the frowns of the great ones in authority, who insist on the covered head with as much emphasis as the custodian of the Mohammedan mosque insists on the removal of the shoes.—Yorkshire Post,

The Frenchman's Love for the Dramatic The Frenchman's Love for the Dramatic. Here is an instance which illustrates the Frenchman's love of what is dramatic. A French soldier sat on a summit of a hill overlooking a garrison town; his horse was picketed close by; the man was smoking leisurely, and from time to time he glanced from the esplande to a big official envelope to be dealing his hand. A company passed by he held in his hand. A comrade passed by and asked: "What are you doing h am bearing the president's pardon for our am bearing the president's pardon for our friend Flichmann, who is to be shot this morning," replied the smoker, calmly, without changing his comfortable attitude, "Well, then, you should hurry along with your pardon," admonished his comrade. "Ah, no?" exclaimed the other, in some indignation: "see, there is hardly a soul yet on the esplanade, and the firing platoon has been formed. You such, would not even been formed. You surely would not have me rob my appearance of all dra-matic effect, my friend!"—San Francisco

Egyptian Astronomy.

The table at Thebes tells us that the sun's journey in relation to some of the zodiacal constellations was perfectly familiar 5,000 years ago in Egypt.

The various apparent movements of the heavenly bodies which are produced by the heavenly bodies which are produced by the rotation and revolution of the earth and the effects of precession were familiar to the Egyptians, however ignorant they may have been of the causes. They carefully studied what they saw and attempted to put their knowledge together in the most convenient fashion, associating it with their strange imaginings and with their system of worship.—Lockyer in Nineteenth Century.

When Edison was Young.

"I see that Thomas Edison is now rated at $3,000,000," said S. J. House, who is spending a few days at the Laclede. "I knew Tom when he was a barefoot boy living at Fort Gratiot, Mich. He was all knew Tom when he was a bareioot boy living at Fort Gratiot, Mich. He was always tinkering with telegraphy, and once rigged up a line from his home to mine, a block away. I could not receive very well and sometimes I would come out, climb on the fence and halloo over to know what he said. That always angered him; he seemed to take it as a reflection upon his telegraph line."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
